

XM is not a threat to the Broadcasters as far as I am concerned. I quit listening to the junk that they put out over the airwaves because it's all the same old stuff, not because XM is adding weather and traffic to their original and mostly commercial-free lineup. They dug their own grave, and shouldn't blame the competition for thier problems. To win back listeners, try improving the quality of the broadcasting being delivered.